THE TRIBUNE.

CINCINNATI IN 1841. Its Early Annals and Future Prospects. By Charles D. (vol. pp. 300). Price 50 cents. Robert Carter, 55 Canal-st.

Here is a complete history and delineation of the Queen City of the West—its Topography, Settlement, Growth, Population, Institutions, Commerce, Manufactures, &c. &c. It affords an excellent answer to disparagers of our country abroad or crackers at home.

Mode of Living in Association.

There is one important fact which we wish particularly to impress upon the minds of our Readers, and that is, that in Association the privacy of Domestic Life—the charms of retirement and seclusion can be enjoyed to the fullest extent. The most perfect Liberty will in every respect exist; the Individual will not be mingled with or merged in the Mass; he will not have to associate in any way with persons whose company may not be congenial to him. The great advantage of large Associations is, that they offer a broad field for the choice of sympathies of character and pleasing social relations, and the scene of action is so large that people need not come together unless they wish.

People feel at present an instinctive dislike for Association, and without knowing the reasons. Let us point out a few of them:—First. The Poverty of the Mass, with all their wants, will always remain as they are now, and that they would have to come in contact with persons without education or refinement. Second. Our false systems of Commerce and Industry, with their envious rivalry and conflicts of interests. The business operations of Men engender ten thousand quarrels, discords and anticipations among them, which render them enemies, and make it appear impossible for them ever to unite and associate.

Third. Differences of Political, Religious and other opinions, arising from differences of education, &c. Fourth. The vices, crimes, and baseness of some individuals,—which excite abhorrence and repel the idea of coming in contact with them.

People suppose that this state of things will always continue, and that a majority of the Human Race will always be either coarse, vulgar, querulous, vicious or brutal. They assert, and with perfect truth, that such horrid discords can never be brought together in order and harmony, and not knowing that these discords can be eradicated, they assert that Association is impossible. They can, however, be eradicated; let us have Association, with its Unity of interests and Concert of action,—with its uniform and thorough system of Education,—with its enjoyment of the Arts and Sciences, which so refine and elevate—let these advantages be extended to all—and all will be elevated. Then Man will feel no antipathy to unite with his fellow Man, and Association will appear the true and natural Social Order.

The CHRISTIAN REVIEW, No. XXVI, for June contains articles on 'Mr. Parker's Discourse,' 'Bunyan's Holy War,' 'The Koran Language,' 'Christian Perfection,' 'Object of the Writers of Gospel History,' 'God's Hand in America,' &c. This is an able and excellent Quarterly of the Orthodox faith, published in Boston. H. & S. Raynor, 76 Bowery, are the Agents for this city.

THE CATHOLIC EXPOSITOR and LITERARY MAGAZINE—Monthly—edited by Rev. Felix Varro and Charles Constantine Pissi, D. D., opens this month with an able article on 'Islamism: Its Conquests and Defeats in Europe.' We have been interested in a paper on 'Thomas Carlyle,' and in a title entitled Philip Riley: on 'The Convict,' by J. A. Shee. This work, exhibiting so much that interests the general reader, must be profoundly valued by those of the Catholic Church.

The 'Wyoming Patriot' (Loco.) has just been started at Tunkhannock, Pa. The probable County Seat of the new County of Wyoming.

WHO PRINCIPLES TWENTY YEARS AGO.—In the year 1824, there was a candidate for the Presidency who had done the country some service as an able and successful General, although then mainly stigmatized by the Albany Argus, Richmond Enquirer and N. Y. Evening Post, as one "Mr. JACKSON," who expressed the following sentiment upon the Tariff Question of that day:

"What is the situation of the present times?—what is the character of the American? Whoever has the American Farmer as his surplus products? Except for cotton, he has neither a foreign nor home market. It is time we should become a little more Americanized, and instead of feeding paupers and idlers in England, feed our own, or else in a short time, by increasing our present policy, we shall be rendered paupers ourselves."

It was by strongly advocating the policy of protecting American agriculture and manufactures that Gen. JACKSON succeeded in obtaining more electoral votes in 1824, than any other candidate in the field. Then the "Hero of New Orleans," had not fallen into the net of juggling demagogues like the Kinderhook stamp. He expressed freely and forcibly his honest convictions of a Protective Tariff and a sound National Bank. He thought that it was time we should become a little more Americanized. His sympathies and regards were not then all bestowed on the Sub-Treasury, bank money systems, and the paupers and laborers of the old world. He saw and enforced the weighty obligation of the General Government to protect American labor and its products from the adverse policy of foreign nations.

[Buffalo Commercial.]

The signal defeat of the Whigs in Virginia will yet be followed by their overthrow in almost every State in the Union. With Henry Clay as their leader, and a National Bank as their motto, nothing but defeat awaits them.

[St. Louis Reporter.]

Pshaw, old neighbor! We can prove the contrary by your own declarations. During the whole of the last Presidential campaign, you persisted in asserting, as a fact notorious and unquestionable, that Mr. Clay was far stronger with the people than General Harrison; and yet Gen. Harrison, you may remember, was elected by a majority of more than one hundred thousand. Now, shades off, if a candidate far weaker than Mr. Clay obtained such an overwhelming majority, how utter and appalling will be the rout of your Locs-Foco squadrone when the strong man himself leads on the charging legions of Whigs! Only think of it, Dash! Will you not advise your friends to surrender without firing a gun? [Lou. Journal.

CURIOS AND ALMOST TRAGICAL OCCURRENCE. The Norfolk Herald says: As a colored female, dressed in the height of the fashion and sporting a dazzling parasol, was passing along Upper Cumberland street on Sunday afternoon, a cow very unmercifully inserted the tip ends of its horns a little below the busting part of her dress, and tossed her about six feet in the air—an exploit which I performed a second time, and then tramped on and mouthed about the unfortunate darky with a seeming determination to make a finish of her. Two gentlemen who witnessed the scene, however, ran to the spot in time to rescue her from the animal, though she was severely bruised, and her face (which had struck upon the pavement in the first fall) was much lacerated. It was the opinion of the gentlemen, from the actions of the cow, that the animal was not so much instigated by malice or wantonness, as a desire to get at the quart of beer in the girl's bustier! So we earnestly advise ladies who wear "them things," to keep out of the way of cows, for some of them will go their own death as well as that of hers for their prop. And perhaps it would be well for the corporate authorities to prohibit these mischievous creatures from going at large within the limits of the Borough where busties are all the go.

This is a neat edition of an excellent, practical work, by a man of strong sense and thorough acquaintance with the subject he discusses. The growing and general interest in Agriculture and Horticulture will doubtless create a demand for a large edition.

INTRODUCTION TO THE SCIENCE OF GOVERNMENT, and Compend of the Constitutional and Civil Jurisprudence of the United States: with a brief Treatise on Political Economy, for the use of Families and Schools. By ANDREW W. YOUNG. (1 vol., plain type, pp. 336.) Dayton & Newbern.

This is a substantial, wholesome work, which ought to be in every family which does not enjoy opportunities of more extensive acquaintance with the subject of which it treats. In its essay on 'Political Economy,' it gives with great fairness the arguments both for 'Protection' and 'Free Trade.'

RULES AND TRUCKS, from Devey's Locker; being Magazine Matter from Loope, and Fragments of Shady Things. In-Ed-to: By W. A. G. (vol. 12mo, pp. 199.) W. E. Devey.

This is an odd collection of Tales, Sketches and Poems, varying from good to middling. There is considerable humor in it, and a rainy half-day might be killed with it quite comfortably.
